Bringing people together

is one of our most valuable services. There's no better way to learn than by connecting with those who have experience and knowledge that you need—and PMI provides you with the opportunity to do just that. We encourage you to connect with other project professionals in your area, volunteer your time to help advance the project management profession, and build your leadership skills.

Volunteering

Volunteers are the lifeblood of PMI and the foundation of our success.

When you volunteer, you not only enrich your membership experience and earn PDUs, you expand your professional network, improve your knowledge, and hone your leadership skills. Join the thousands of volunteers who serve in communities and organizations around the world to spread the word about the value of project management.

Get leadership experience that you may not have opportunity to gain in your job.
